

Swatches

>>> who's doing what, where in the design industry

BY NORA BURBA TRULSSON

DesignBuildBLUFF, the University of Utah College of Architecture's work-study program, has announced two new projects. The program, which gives architecture students the opportunity to design and build off-the-grid, low-cost housing on the Navajo Nation, will be building its own student-housing facility and bathhouse near the Navajo Nation projects. The new facility will utilize three discarded steel shipping containers as the structure. Additionally, the program is partnering with the Utah-based charitable Ssejinja Children's Foundation to design and build a medical center for AIDS-orphaned African children in Bira, Uganda.

DesignBuildBLUFF's recent residential work on the Navajo Nation.